The Dept. of Mechanical and Civil Engineering of Tula's Institute has organized a 60 hours training programme for the student of second year mechanical and civil engineering. Mr. Amarpreet Singh from RCPL Delhi was the trainer for Auto Cad.

The Programme was organized by Mr. Rajesh Pandit Asst. Professor Tula's Institute. AutoCAD is a 2-D and 3-D computer-aided drafting software application used in architecture, construction, and manufacturing to assist in the preparation of blueprints and other engineering plans.

Professionals who use AutoCAD are often referred to as drafters.

The extensive applications of CAD software and AutoCAD sample drawings ensure its inevitability and durability in today's world. AutoCAD software was the first CAD programme and it is still the most widely used CAD application. The drawing of engineering components, infrastructure designs and analyzing HVAC systems plays a major role in most engineering –Civil, Mechanical, Systems and Electrical engineering— fields. And to do this while minimizing human errors, the use of a computer aided design application is recommended. AutoCAD is a comprehensive Computer Aided Design (CAD) program from AutoDesk. Like other CAD software packages, AutoCAD allows designers and technicians - such as mechanical engineers -- to create detailed, three-dimensional digital models of their work, complete with information about dimensions, materials and the functioning of moving parts.

This process can save mechanical engineers and small mechanical engineering businesses a considerable amount of time and money as compared to traditional prototyping, as well as facilitating communication and testing.
